Historical note

Morris Blackburn was born in Philadelphia and spent his career in the city. After schooling at the Philadelphia Trade School and work in the Hog Island shipbuilding yard, he began his art training in 1922 at the Graphic Sketch Club. He studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts from 1925 to 1929, winning two Cresson Traveling Scholarships. In the mid-1930s he participated in the Public Works Art Project, executing murals for the Mastbaum Vocational School and Haverford High School. He began his long teaching career in 1932 at the Pennsylvania Museum School of Industrial Art. Around 1936-37 Blackburn attended the private classes of Arthur B. Charles, who became his close friend and mentor.

In the mid-1940s he undertook a variety of teaching positions and from 1948 to 1952 he taught graphics at Tyler School of Art. In 1945 he initiated the adult training program at the Philadelphia Museum where he continued to hold classes until 1972. In 1952 Blackburn joined the faculty of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. Beginning as the Academy's first instructor in graphics, he was involved with the re-evaluation and changes in the curriculum leading to the introduction of a general program for first-year students. He frequently gave informal seminars in his home, and held private classes in landscape painting in southern New Jersey.

He worked in a wide variety of media, using Philadelphia or New Jersey scenes as his subjects. His style emphasized strong compositional elements, and often recalled his early concern with abstraction. He was the subject of several films. "Portrait of a Painter" was completed in 1959 by Emidio Angelo. "South Jersey Sketchbook" was made for Channel 52 in Philadelphia, and "Time-Binding," a film about his teaching and painting methods, was in progress during the last years of his life.

The above biography was excerpted from the lengthier information in Philadelphia: Three Centuries of American Art, (Philadelphia Museum of Art, 1976), pp. 584-86.

Scope and Contents note

The Blackburn manuscript collection includes correspondence, diaries, writings, photographs, clippings, and printed matter, including oversize materials in almost every category. All the materials were found in the Blackburn home upon the death of his daughter (see scope and content note). The home also contained numerous works of art which were transferred to the Academy school.

In 1989, while Blackburn's widow was the custodian of the collection, the Archives of American Art microfilmed the correspondence and diaries (AAA rolls 4159-4166). In clearing out Blackburn's studio (September of 2000) additional materials were found which had not been filmed. All correspondence, filmed or unfiled, has been integrated into the final processed collection.

Numerous audio recordings and films, in various formats, are also included in the collection. Some transcriptions of the audio tapes are preserved with Blackburn's writings. It is not clear how much the content of the audio and film materials would differ from that contained in Blackburn's numerous written manuscripts.

The Academy archives also houses 3 audio recordings of Blackburn interviews, and an interview with his friend Jack Bookbinder, which were not part of this collection.

Immediate Source of Acquisition note

Provenance note

The collection was in Blackburn's studio at the time of his death. His widow, Betty (died March 9, 1996), and his daughter, Joan ("Patsy," died February 25, 1999), bequeathed it to the Academy, along with the house and all of the remaining works of art.

In 1988 Mrs. Blackburn invited several Academy staff members to examine the collection, which she intended to give to the Academy. Conditions on the top-floor studio of the row house were typical of an older home, with no air conditioning, poor ventilation and unprotected windows. Several recommendations were made, but it was not until the year 2000 that the materials were transferred to the Academy and the house sold.

The papers of Morris Blackburn, a faculty member at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts for over twenty years, have recently entered the institution's Archives. I am now trying to sort out the many deteriorated films and reel-to-reel audio tapes in the collection, and am specifically searching for a copy of the 1959 film "Portrait of a Painter" by Emidio Angelo. The film is of particular interest as it may show Blackburn teaching here at the Academy.

I believe that several copies of the film were distributed, by Emidio Angelo, to various students of Blackburn's and other members of the Philadelphia art community. If anyone can put me in touch with Mr. Angelo's descendants, or has a copy of the film which they would donate to the Academy we would be most appreciative. One or two other films about Blackburn were also made and these would be of interest as well.

I am also searching for persons who studied with Blackburn to come in to the Archives and look over, and hopefully, identify the many photographs of unidentified people in the collection.

Dear Mr. Greenwood,

The papers of Morris Blackburn have recently entered the Academy Archives, after a twenty year rest in his studio. I have finished processing them and am now trying to sort out the many deteriorated films and reel-to-reel audio tapes in the collection. I'm specifically searching for a copy of the 1959 film "Portrait of a Painter" by Emidio Angelo. The film is of particular interest as it may show Blackburn teaching here at the Academy. Do you remember if this is the case?

One or two other films about Blackburn were also made and these would be of interest as well if copies could be located. I'm writing to Dennis Gillespie, Marie Naples, and Babette Martino to see if any of them can be of help.

I am also searching for persons who studied with Blackburn to come in to the Archives and look over, and hopefully, identify the many photographs of unidentified people in the collection. Would you want to participate in this effort? Do you know of any other people it would be good to contact in this regard?

Feel free to call me at the number below. I hope to hear from you.

Sincerely yours,

Cheryl Leibold, Archivist

When asked, several PAFA faculty members recalled that Blackburn would invite students over to his studio, and a kind of game would be played where he would pass this small canvas around and ask people to guess to whom it had belonged. And then he would reveal that it had been Renoir's.
