Abstract	Collection provides comprehensive documentation of the curatorial files for the Peale House Gallery. Peale House exhibitions took place in the Academy's school buildings on Chestnut Street. These exhibitions are generally documented only by an invitation and a checklist. Photography of artworks and of the installations for this series is extensive. From 1964 to early March 1978, the series was run by the museum.

Historical note

In 1964 the position of Peale House gallery coordinator was created. The first occupant, Marjorie Ruben, worked part-time, organizing exhibitions of contemporary art at the Peale House (the Chestnut Street building housing the school). She managed a program that consisted primarily of one- and two-person exhibitions and some small group shows. The program continued in this form until 1978, when it was essentially incorporated into the Morris Gallery exhibition program.

Exhibitions continued at the Peale House after 1978, organized by a committee of school faculty members with little documentation and almost no input from the museum. The records of this series are thus part of the school's records. These exhibitions focused primarily on work by students, faculty, and alumni and continued until the building was sold in 1988.
